FRANK C. SANSONE, MI 165-13 and ANTHONY and THOMAS MACHI (165-45) are the major bookmakers paying off to the outfit. The number of calls made to SANSONE is of particular interest since it is known that SANSONE and the MACHIs are booking from their homes but their source of line information is unknown at the present time. If the 111 phone calls made to SANSONE are made on a daily basis at a regular time which would possibly indicate these calls were in connection with gambling matters, this information could possibly be used as supporting evidence in the event court permission for an electronic coverage of SANSONE's phone is requested at some future date.

SANSONE did not know the reason why RAY MIRR was served with a subpoena as MIRR was not presently engaged in any gambling activities and has had no association with LOCOCO for approximately ten years.

SANSONE indicated that LOCOCO had called him frequently during the 1968 football season for line information, which he could compare with the line information he was receiving in California, thus giving him an advantageous position for placing profitable wagers. The informant did not know LOCOCO to be a bookmaker as such, but believed him to be a heavy bettor.

The informant said that [REDACTED] had made arrangements for CARL DENTICE to take over the cigarette machine concessions at Nino's Steakhouse Restaurants in Milwaukee. According to the informant, DENTICE is a front for BALISTRIERI in the coin machine business.

This informant received information that FRANK SANSONE and the other bookmakers in Milwaukee have been taking a beating financially. Informant was sure that SANSONE was obtaining line information, and that TONY PETROLLE was also independently obtaining his own line information due to the fact he did not trust SANSONE.

The PC described RAY MIRR as a former bookmaker, but who now was only an occasional bettor who may bet up to $50.00 a week during football season. He said MIRR's primary occupation is that of a dental technician. He believed that MIRR had a personal acquaintanceship with LOCOCO, which dated back many years.

The PC advised that BOBBY PICK is still running a bookmaking operation from his home at Lake Tichigan, Wisconsin. PICK has daily telephone contact with STEVE HALMO and [REDACTED] LNU, who works with HALMO in his bookmaking operation. The PC believed that HALMO and PICK were possibly "laying off" with each other. The PC indicated he had heard rumors that HALMO made $35,000 two weeks ago through some very smart bets, which he had placed.

The PC said PICK, SANSONE, and HALMO, along with [REDACTED] [REDACTED] still meet out of habit during the late evenings on Mondays at the Clock Bar and Fazio's Restaurant.

The PC advised that rumors are still circulating that bookmakers in Milwaukee are taking a financial beating due to the fact their customers are obtaining better line information than the bookmakers. The PC mentioned that customers feel safe in contacting friends in other parts of the country for betting line information, which can be compared with line information they are obtaining from their local bookmakers, which places them in a better position to make successful bets. Customers feel that their long-distance toll calls are not being checked in the same manner that long-distance toll calls for known bookmakers would be checked.

Gambler Here Is Fined $2,000

A Milwaukee gambler convicted of failing to buy a $50 federal gambling tax stamp was fined $2,000 Monday by Federal Judge Kenneth P. Grubb.

Raymond L. Mirr, 51, of 1259 N. 72nd st., Wauwatosa, was given 90 days to pay.

Mirr, a dental technician, was one of five men indicted by a federal grand jury in June, 1962 on federal gambling charges. Three of the defendants were fined amounts ranging from $1,000 to $2,500. One was given a six month suspended sentence and was placed on probation for a year.

The fifth, Raymond C. Hobert, 47, of 2916 N. Humboldt av., is awaiting sentence. He was convicted of failing to purchase a tax stamp.

Mirr pleaded no contest to the charge which stemmed from a raid in 1960 by internal revenue agents at his business, the Supreme Dental Laboratory and the Technic Dental Laboratories, 952 N. 12th st. The raid was part of a nation-wide crack-down on suspected gambling places.

Crime in Milwaukee Described to Court

Organized crime in Milwaukee — including bookmaking operations and concealed financial transactions—was described in a document entered into court records in Los Angeles Wednesday.

The report was made by Asst. US Atty. Gerald F. Uelmen to Federal Judge A. Andrew Hauk in the case of a former Milwaukeean — Andrew Lococo, who was convicted of perjury in Hauk's court April 16.

Lococo, 51, was convicted of lying before a federal grand jury June 26, 1969, when he denied speaking to Ray Mirr, a convicted Milwaukee gambler, over the telephone in the previous year.

The grand jury was investigating the fixing of horse races in California and Florida through dope, bribes and other means.

Sentencing on Monday

Lococo is to be sentenced at 2 p.m. Monday.

Uelmen made the report as a recommendation to Hauk in "the interests of justice in achieving uniformity in sentencing, the effectiveness of jail sentences in perjury cases as a deterrent and the criminal background and organized crime affiliations of Lococo."

Uelmen's report was compiled from the files of the FBI, federal narcotics division files, internal revenue service investigations, the intelligence division of the Los Angeles police department and confidential sources.

Uelmen said that Frank P. Balistreri, head of the Milwaukee Cosa Nostra family, obtained a $125,000 loan from a Milwaukee bank after Frank H. Ranney, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 604, told the bank that a large teamster deposit would be made if the bank granted a loan to Frank Balistreri through Balistreri's attorney son, Joseph. A $500,000 deposit from the Teamster Central and Southern States Pension Fund, of which Ranney is a trustee, was made Sept. 10, 1968, and on the same day a $125,000 loan was made to Joseph Balistreri, Uelmen's report said.

Restaurant in Suburb

Uelmen said that Lococo also attempted to use Frank Balistreri's influence in obtaining a Teamster loan for an expansion to Lococo's hotel and restaurant in Hawthorne, a suburb 15 miles south of Los Angeles.

The report also indicated that Balistreri headed an extensive bookmaking operation in the Milwaukee area and that it had connections in California.

One of Balistreri's close associates

Steve De Salvo, operated a bookmaking business out of Fazio's Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge, 634 N. 5th St., Uelmen said. The report did not give dates for the operation.

Uelmen also said that Balistreri frequently used his son, Joseph, as a cover to conceal the elder Balistreri's financial transactions.

Part of the verbatim report, submitted in writing as part of the court record, follows:

"In 1948, the defendant (Lococo) purchased an interest in the Cockatoo Cafe in Hawthorne, becoming sole owner a short time later. By the defendant's own admission, bookmaking activities were carried on at the Cockatoo at this time. The defendant was arrested on a bookmaking charge by the Los Angeles County sheriff's officers on Sept. 21, 1949.

Had Fire in 1958

"The Cockatoo was destroyed by fire Jan. 29, 1958, and reopened as the Cockatoo Inn in October, 1958. Since that time, a Cockatoo Hotel has been added, and considerably expanded. Frequent allegations concerning prostitution and gambling activity at the establishment, have been made in the course of the past 20 years. However, local authorities have indicated they have found no evidence to support these allegations. It has been suggested they are in a position to know, since the 'city fathers' are frequently Mr. Lococo's guests at the Cockatoo Inn.

"In November, 1958, the defendant was subpoenaed before the Rackets Committee of the California State Assembly. He declined to answer questions.

Heavy Betting Reported

"More recently, the defendant has been known as a very large bettor, both on horse races and sporting events. He is a frequent patron of the racetrack, where he has been seen in the company of many of the leading members of the Los Angeles 'Cosa Nostra' family, including Frank Desimone, now deceased, who attended the 1957 Appalachian conference, and Nick Lacata, identified as the present boss.

of the family. Lococo has also been reported as the source of large 'layoff' bets, including a wager placed through William Lawler, as evidence produced in this trial disclosed.

"Throughout the past 30 years, the defendant has maintained close relationships with many Milwaukee racketeers, a number of which relationships were disclosed in the course of this trial.

"The closest associates of the defendant include the following:

"A. Frank P. Balistreri:

"Frank P. Balistreri was publicly identified as head of the Milwaukee 'family' of the Cosa Nostra by Sen. McClellan on March 11, 1969. Balistreri, who operates a string of six Milwaukee nightclubs, in most of which his interest is concealed by having the licenses held in the name of relatives and associates, is presently appealing a 1967 conviction of income tax evasion upon which he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

"Balistreri reportedly takes his orders from Felix (Milwaukee Phil) Alderisio, notorious Chicago racketeer presently serving a prison sentence for transmitting murderous threats in interstate commerce. Balistreri's relationship to Alderisio was recently confirmed in a petition to the Supreme Court on Balistreri's behalf. In it, Atty. Edward Bennett Williams disclosed that Alderisio admitted Balistreri had been a frequent visitor to premises used by Alderisio at 645 N. Michigan Ave. in Chicago in 1964 and 1965. The 'bugging' of these premises had been disclosed in the course of a hearing last year before Judge Warren J. Ferguson of this court.

"The relationship between the defendant, Andrew J. Lococo, and Balistreri is an extremely close one involving numerous financial ties. As disclosed by the evidence in this trial, at least 21 telephone calls were made from the defendant's office at the Cockatoo restaurant to Balistreri in Milwaukee in a six month period, most of them person to person to Frank Balistreri. Several of the calls, interestingly enough, were made person to person to Balistreri at Milwaukee nightclubs in which his interest is concealed: 'The Scene' at 624 N. 2d St. in Milwaukee, and the 'Kings IV' at 720 N. Water

St. in Milwaukee. Calls were also placed to Balistreri's home and charged to the Cockatoo credit card from Washington, D. C., and Cicero, Ill., at times when the defendant was in these locations.

"The defendant's explanation of these calls as being to 'Joseph Balistreri,' his attorney, to negotiate a loan from the Teamsters' fund in Chicago for expansion of his hotel, is especially interesting in light of these facts:

"A. Joseph Balistreri is the 28 year old son of Frank Balistreri, and has frequently been used as a 'cover' to conceal his father's interest in various financial transactions. For example, a joint account with Joseph was one of the devices used by Balistreri to conceal his assets, as disclosed in his tax evasion trial.

"B. Frank Balistreri is known to be a close associate of Frank H. Ranney, secretary of a Milwaukee Teamsters' local. In September of 1968, a Milwaukee bank was approached by Joseph Balistreri for a loan of $125,000 to purchase a building in which a Milwaukee nightclub was located. After the loan was initially turned down, Frank H. Ranney contacted the bank and informed them a large deposit of Teamster union pension funds would be available if the bank, in turn, granted a loan to Frank Balistreri through his son, Joseph.

"On Sept. 10, 1968, the bank received a deposit of $500,000 cash from the Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund of the teamsters' union, of which Ranney was a trustee. On the same day, a commercial loan of $125,000 to Joseph Balistreri was granted by the bank. Two weeks later, an additional loan of $63,000 was approved.

"Thus, it is readily apparent that Lococo was seeking to use Frank Balistreri's influence to secure teamster financing for expansion of the Cockatoo Hotel. Reliable information has also been received that Balistreri sought to assist Lococo in the financing of a $1 million tuna boat venture which was never consummated.

"It should be noted that in his testimony before the grand jury in this case, the defendant, denied ever having any business transactions or connections, whatsoever with Balistreri, and stated he could not remember the last time he had spoken by telephone to Balistreri. The 21 calls revealed in this trial were made in the six months immediately preceding the defendant's grand jury appearance.

"Lococo has been known to confer with Balistreri frequently in the course of numerous trips to Milwaukee, and reliable sources indicated that Balistreri, accompanied by Steve De Salvo and Tony Petrolle, also known as Tony Marchi, was a guest of Lococo's at the Cockatoo in late December, 1968. In his June 26, 1969, appearance before the grand jury, the defendant denied having seen Balistreri in California during the previous year.

"In a subsequent appearance, on Sept. 4, 1969, the defendant was ordered to produce all registration records for the Cockatoo for Balistrieri, De Salvo and Machi. None were produced for Balistrieri or De Salvo, and the defendant declined to answer whether they had ever stayed at the Cockatoo. A registration record was produced, however, under the name 'T. Machi,' indicating three guests staying at the Cockatoo Dec. 27-30, 1968, all "compliments" of the house.

"Andrew Lococo can make no claim that he was unaware of Balistrieri's background as a racketeer. In January of 1965, when asked if he would assist the FBI by providing information regarding criminal activities, he responded that he had friends in Milwaukee who were reputedly hoodlums, mentioning Buster (Frank) Balistrieri by name. At that time, he indicated he would be reluctant to assist the FBI with regard to Balistrieri, since he grew up with him, they palled around together and even committed minor violations of the law together."

"B. Steve De Salvo:

"De Salvo, a Milwaukee bookmaker, has been identified as a member of Balistrieri's Milwaukee 'family' of the Cosa Nostra. He was known to operate a bookmaking operation out of Fazio's restaurant, operated by Frank and Anthony Fazio on 5th St. in Milwaukee. De Salvo has been identified as a visitor to the Cockatoo in late December, 1968, with Balistrieri and Machi."

"In his grand jury appearance, the defendant said he did not remember ever seeing Balistrieri and De Salvo together, but admitted De Salvo had 'stopped by' in California with Tony Machi in the previous year."

"C. Thomas and Ton Petro, also known as Machi: "Both Machis are known bookmakers in the Milwaukee area. Both are frequent recipients of telephone calls from the defendant's office at the Cockatoo and the defendant's residence. In the six month period between October, 1968, and April, 1969, there were seven such calls to Tony Machi in Milwaukee, and 10 calls to Thomas Machi. Tony Machi is also a frequent visitor to the defendant's hotel, having registered there March 9-11, 1968; Dec. 2-5, 1968; Dec. 27-30, 1968 (with De Salvo and Balistrieri), and Jan. 13-16, 1969. All of these stays were 'compliments of the house.'

"Tony Machi also accompanied Lococo on a fishing trip to Mexico in January, 1969. Other than the belief he 'had a ear' in Milwaukee, the defendant professed ignorance as to Machi's occupation or source of income."

"D. Frank L. Sansone:

"The 117 calls to Sansone's residence during a four month period, from both the defendant's residence and office, as well as credit card calls from other locations, are a matter of record in this case. How many of these calls were made by the defendant, and how many by his brother, Nick, remains a mystery, but it is most unlikely these calls were just to 'talk football.'"

"Sansone has long been known as a Milwaukee bookmaker, operating under the patronage of the Balistrieri organization. On Nov. 24, 1969, Sansone was arrested by FBI agents on charges of interstate transmission of wagering information. Arrested at the same time, in Las Vegas, Nev., was Sansone's son, who was observed calling 'line information' to his father from Las Vegas. Numerous betting markers and other wagering paraphernalia were seized in Sansone's Milwaukee home at the time of his arrest. Sansone has several prior gambling convictions, and once served a prison term for ~~white slave~~ act (white slave traffic) offenses."

"He was a guest (compliments of the house) of Lococo's at the Cockatoo on the occasion of his appearance before the grand jury July 17-18, 1969."

"The defendant is known to be a frequent associate of a number of individuals in the Los Angeles area who are known to be engaged in bookmaking and related activities."

Ranney had no comment. Neither Balistrieri could be reached for comment."

During Lococo's trial, which lasted a week, US Atty. Uelman introduced evidence showing that Lococo had made at least eight calls to Mirr's home, 1259 N. 72nd St., Wauwatosa, or to his business, Technic Dental Laboratory, 2250 S. Kinnickinnic Ave., between June, 1968, and June, 1969."

Mirr admitted in court that he had talked by telephone to Lococo and to Lococo's brother, Nick, in the year before the grand jury investigation. Mirr had testified before the grand jury July 17, 1969, and Aug. 21, 1969."

Mirr was asked whether his telephone conversations with the Lococo brothers were about football and about odds on professional and college games. Mirr conceded that they had talked about football."

"I could never make predictions like that (point spreads)," said Mirr."
